Desperate Riot at Louisville.

THE MURDERERS OF THE JOYCE FAMILY HANGED BY A MOB.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, May 14.

The four negroes accused of murdering the Joyce family some months since have been acquitted. One of them turned State's evidence, but his testimony was not legally corroborated. There was considerable excitement about the Court-House during the trial.

About dark a mob broke into the common house and got a cannon, which they placed in front of the jail. Several shots were fired by the mob and from the jail. The jailer, fearing the escape of the prisoners, formally surrendered two of them, who were hung by the mob. The third cut his throat with a razor, but the negro who turned State's evidence was unmolested.

A LATER DISPATCH.

The remaining negro implicated in the Joyce murder was hung by the mob last night—making three hanged and one suicide.

Suffering for want of Food in Northern Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., Friday, May 15.

Reliable information has been received here of great destitution existing in Grand County and other secluded localities in the northern part of this state. Several persons have already died from starvation, and cattle were also dying from want of food. A meeting of our citizens will be held this evening to devise means of relief.

Celebration of the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Settlement of Jamestown, Va.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

JAMESTOWN, Va., Wednesday, May 13, 1857.

I have been at Richmond for several days, awaiting the arrival of the day fixed for the celebration of the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown. This has been the event of the week, and as there are few occasions of equal interest to Virginians, the citizens seemed determined to make the most of it; accordingly the town has been in a bustle for a week with stirring events incident to the preparations for the celebration, and with the arrival of strangers, distinguished and otherwise, which has imparted a lively aspect to this usually quiet place.

On Monday night, the military, consisting of six companies, embarked for the scene of the celebration, with one day's rations; they were followed to the place of embarkation by a throng of citizens, and made an imposing display. The steamer Maryland, which had been sent down from Washington on a special charter for the purpose, took the m down to Jamestown; their object being to encamp on the ground, and have everything in readiness to appear respectably under a review. The weather looked unfavorable, and threatened rain, but fortunately yesterday proved a pleasant day, and to-day the weather is delightful. The steamers Jamestown, Norfolk, Maryland, and Curtis Peak have been employed in bringing passengers to the place, Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk, Petersburg, and other places have contributed hundreds of their citizens, who have poured in by steamboat and railroad to the common centre of attraction. It is estimated that there are about eight thousand persons on the ground, including sixteen military companies, the latter being encamped at Travers, two miles from Jamestown. The reason for selecting a spot so remote from the town is probably the one given by an old negro, of whom I inquired on that point. His answer was: "'Spose there aint room in Jamestown."

This will appear perfectly rational after I have given you a very brief description of the place.

It is some two hundred years since Capt. JOHN SMITH was chased through a swamp, and was finally captured by the Indians, while up to his knees in sand somewhere in this neighborhood; and, notwithstanding the long time that the inhabitants hereabout have had to build up the place, a stranger is impressed with the little progress that has been made. The spot where those first settlers laid the foundation of a city that was to rival in magnificence the cities of Europe, from which they had come, is now marked by a thirty-foot tower of bricks, which was once attached to a church of the same material, all which were brought from England. The remainder of the edifice in which the settlers worshipped has long since crumbled to decay. There are also the remains of a brick wall, three feet high, which surrounds the burying ground, where repose the ashes of the long since departed, and a few scattering gravestones, on which are scarcely traceable the memories of those who sleep beneath them. This is all of the long-celebrated Jamestown. Over the fields where once bustled the id emigrants now flourish vigorous growths of wheat and rye; there is no monument to the departed; not even a flag-staff, on which to hoist a pennant; and nothing in the shape of banners are seen, except those displayed from the mast heads of the steamers lying near. The land lies very level along the bank of the river as far as the eye can see.

There is an old dock abreast of the place, on which we were landed by the boats of the steamers, and then were put ashore by a scow. On reaching the banks of the river we found ample arrangements for the transport of passengers to the encampment. These consisted of one carriage of two horses, several mule-teams, and one or two ox-carts. Into these vehicles crowded men, women (excuse me—ladies—there are no women here) and children. The fare was 50c., and the ride was worth it, although it was a short one. The encampment was covered over with the tents of the military, and around the outskirts were numerous shads and booths, where big pots hung over the fire, for boiling provisions for the people, and ready articles were being sold, after the manner of a New England militia training.

Mr. HENRY RYRIE, the person so well known as the volunteer from Richmond, to nurse the sick at New York during the yellow fever period, had been several days upon the ground, erecting buildings for the accommodation of the multitude; among these was a large shed, where the table was spread, and where the ball was afterwards held.

The appearance of Ex-President TYLER upon the stand was the signal for great enthusiasm, and cheer on cheer arose from the assembled thousands. His oration occupied something over two hours in the delivery.

Governor WISE, with other distinguished personages, occupied a place upon the stand, and at the close of the oration came forward and made a brief speech at the call of the multitude.

In the evening there was a grand ball, and a large display of fireworks, which closed the proceedings.

The military companies are to remain encamped upon the ground for two days longer, when the encampment will be broken up, and the place will be surrendered to its customary quiet, until another anniversary comes round, when there will no doubt be a repetition of the scenes of the last few days, with slight variations.

The first celebration of this event took place about 20 years ago, and this is the second. A difference of opinion exists as to the true day of the landing of Captain SMITH, and discussion on that point runs high, the importance of the exact day being considered akin to that of the true Christmas. Many insist that the 13th and not the 15th is the day, but this proceeding will settle that important point, and the 15th will be the day hereafter provided that there is extant in a quarter of a century hence, patriotic descendants of John SMITH enough to make a respectable show. It is understood there is a Society in Washington for the express purpose of celebrating the annual observance of this event.

I saw no other representative of the New-York Press here except Mr. JAMES BARNES, of the Express, who took passage in the Jamestown for New-York before the completion of the ceremonies.

I observed a large number of persons busy among the gravestones, transcribing the inscriptions upon them. One that I noticed, a part of which was quite illegible, bore the date—16—X, the two figures of the hundred only being visible. One of them was a flat slab laid horizontally upon supports, with an inscription upon the top; by the side of this a tree had sprung up, and its trunk had so enclosed the stone that the inscription was nearly hidden from view.

THE ANNIVERSARIES

The A. B. C. F. M.

The annual meeting in behalf of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions was held yesterday morning in Dr. CHEEVER's Church, Hon. THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN presiding. The annual statement was presented by Rev. Dr. WOOD, one of the Secretaries. The Board announce that unwonted hindrances and perils beset their work. The Mission at Canton is for the present driven from the ground, and by the destruction of books and other property has sustained a pecuniary loss of $14,000. The Board also state that if the war in China should become general, the other Missions in that country may be compelled to withdraw. A new spirit of intolerance in the Persian Government has occasioned anxiety, and thrown new obstacles in the way of the Nestorian Mission. Four male and four female missionaries of the Board have died during the year. The state of affairs in India and Turkey is more encouraging. In Turkey, full liberty of religious belief exists, and 5,700 copies of the Bible and New Testament have been sold to Turks. The Turkish authorities, in honorable observance of the Hatti Sherif, stay the carrying out of the death-denouncing law of the Koran, and converts from Mahomedanism, known as such, are now living unmolested among their own people. The first Moslem convert is also the first licensed preacher of the Gospel from that faith. The first published book in the language of the Mahomedan Koords has issued from the press—being the Gospel of Matthew, as translated by an Armenian graduate of the Bebek Seminary. Numerous towns and villages of the Koreb-tribe—a peculiar sect of Mahomedans in Asia Minor and on the Mesopotamian plain—not only invite, but plead for missionaries to reside among them. In Turkey, 15 missionaries are under appointment of the Board.

The receipts of the Board are $19,000 ahead of last year. Thirteen thousand dollars were asked for the building of the missionary packet Morning Star, and $22,000 were contributed. The handsome surplus remaining is set aside to keep the vessel in repair.

The speakers at yesterday's meeting were representatives from Asia, Africa and the Sandwich Islands. Rev. ALBERT BURNELL presented the results of the operations of the year in the Gaboon Mission in West Africa; Rev. E. J. BRICKWATH, President of Oahu College, spoke of the Sandwich Islands; Rev. Dr. RIGGS told of Constantinople; Rev. BENJAMIN SCHNEIDER spoke for Aintab in Turkey; Rev. E. DWIGHT HUNT appeared for California; and Rev. H. D. GARDE, of this City, spoke for missions generally, and New-York in particular. Dr. RIGGS pressed the necessity for the establishment of mission stations in Wallachia and Moldavia. Mr. SCHNEIDER gave an entertaining account of the progress of missions in Aintab and its vicinity. The church in Aintab, which has labored under great difficulties, has now a membership of 200; it began with 8. The Sunday-school has 150 scholars; the day school 250. There are two theological classes, one of 5, and the other of 2. There are 15 or 20 colporteurs, 6 or 8 of whom are in active service. Mr. GARDE, the last speaker, enlarged upon the want of sympathy for the missionary cause among the churches. He commented with severity upon the coldness which pervades Christians in reference to this matter, and compared the lack of effective results in the foreign field of to-day with the eminent successes which attended the ministries of Paul and Barnabas. The efforts of the churches result comparatively in so little good, that the ill-success of the missions is not a matter of wonder. He urged upon Christians the necessity of a greater interest in the spread of the Gospel among the heathen.

American Bible Society.

The American Bible Society held its anniversary Thursday morning at Dr. CHEEVER's church. Hon. THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN presided, and opened the proceedings with a few remarks upon the general results of the operations of the Society during the year. The appearance of affairs is exceedingly encouraging. The report of the Secretaries show the following results:

The receipts of the year from all sources have been $441,905 69; being $49 488 49 more than those of the previous year. The portion for books sold, $288,456 03.

Books printed, 741,015 volumes. Books issued, 712,522; being 104,297 more than the issues of the previous year, and an aggregate, since the formation of the Society, of 12,054,434.

Sixty-eight new Auxiliaries have been added, most of them South and West.

Eighty-nine Life Directors, and 1,816 Life Members, have been added.

NEW BOOKS.—A new royal octavo Bible, in pica type, has been published, and a new pocket Bible in diamond type. Also, a large New Testament in great primer type, for the aged. Also, at the Society's House, a New Testament in Ottawa; and a Testament Hawaiian and English, in parallel columns.

AGENTS.—In the Home field, thirty-six have been employed, including the force in Utah, California and Oregon.

In the Foreign field, three have been employed in portion of the year—Rev. HENRY WILLIAMS (in Nicaragua) and ROGERS (in Turkey) having died, greatly lamented.

Money granted for publishing the Scriptures in foreign countries, $83,344 09; which, with the expense of publishing the last two books named, makes an aggregate for foreign purposes of more than $90,000.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That all nations be invited to contribute to compare in wisdom and power with those furnished by the Bible itself.

Resolved, That the Bible, and a Bible made public property, are indispensable to true liberty both in Church and in State.

Resolved, That the Bible, important to all families, is peculiarly needful to those in our new and sparsely settled States and Territories.

Resolved, That the Society has occasion for devout thanksgiving to God, that while its friends have been engaged the past year in a special systematic supply of our own country with the Bible, their hands in the same time furnished more than $20,000 toward publishing the same work in foreign countries.

The speakers were Rev. Dr. RIGGS, of Constantinople; Rev. THOMAS SEWALL, of Baltimore; Rev. Dr. WILKES, of Montreal; Rev. DUDLEY A. TYNG, of Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. WINSLOW, of Ceylon, and Rev. W. F. WILLIAMS, of Mosul. The leading speech of the day was that of Mr. TYNG, who offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Bible is God's revelation to the individual mind, and therefore that its universal distribution is the sacred right and duty of man.

Mr. TYNG held that this resolution covers the whole ground of the Bible Society, and proceeded to argue the individuality of man. Man is born alone and dies alone, and fills up the measure of the period between these two extremes by himself alone. To God deals with us individually, and hence the speaker proceeded to argue that the efforts put forth by this Society to reach individuals with the Bible were efforts in precisely the right direction.

Centennial Commemoration of the Swedenborgian Church—Address of Professor Bush.

The members of the "New Church," properly known as Swedenborgians, assembled last night, in Hope Chapel, Broadway, to hear a discourse from Professor BUSH, on the doctrines, present condition, and prospects of their Church. The building was nearly filled—a much larger number of auditors being in attendance than were present at the Chapel in Eleventh-street during the services of the previous day. After the singing of a hymn and the announcement of meetings for to-day and to-morrow, Professor BUSH commenced his oration. He alluded to the interest of the occasion, the One Hundredth Anniversary of the establishment of the New Church. There was always a disposition in men to celebrate anniversaries of great events. In all history, from the Greek festivals to our own Fourth of July, this characteristic was conspicuous. So it was also in religious matters, and more especially should it be so in their own case. For the establishment of a new Church after the passing away of an old one was like the rising of a new sun upon the earth. It was in devout celebration of such an event that they had met together, to commemorate the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Church of the New Jerusalem, the crown and consummation of all churches.

Christianity, the Professor went on to infer, was corrupt and effete, when Swedenborg first turned his attention from scientific to religious subjects, and became the expounder of a New Revelation. To his disciples now, it was a perpetual wonder that his doctrines were not everywhere adopted, and that there was not a general influx of proselytes from all quarters, so overpowerfully convincing were the proofs of his mission. But the establishment of Christianity, they should remember, commenced in the same humble manner. A little band of disciples gathered in an upper room in Jerusalem, and that slender meeting was the incipiency of the Christian religion, and one century ago the last judgment in the Spiritual World was ushered in by the establishment of the New Church, which was destined to endure forever. When making that statement, he of course, would be liable to be met by the interrogation, "What necessity existed for the destruction of the Old and the establishment of a New Church?" All churches, he would answer, were prone to deterioration and decay. Facilis descensus might be inscribed on them all, when once they began to decline. When Swedenborg appeared, darkness and desolation overwhelmed the Church. It was the era of her profoundest slumber. But Swedenborg raised the cry, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh," and in 1757 he came. Prophecy had foretold that he should come in "the clouds of Heaven," and a coarse, literal, naturalistic interpretation had imaged him as so coming, but the seer and scribe of the New Church taught, that his coming was not synchronical with the end of the world, but that the object of such coming must be in accordance with the moral demands of humanity.—The coming of the Bridegroom in the clouds of Heaven was symbolical of the revelation of the Divine spirit to the darkened mind of man. Were the sun to rise at midnight instead of at the morning hour, and in the West instead of the East, it would not be more astounding than the announcement made by a Swedish seaman, that the ages of the Church's existance were ended, and that the second coming of Christ had begun.

The speaker proceeded to comment at considerable length on the vital importance to mankind of the revelations of SWEDENBORG, and the doctrines of the New Church. The old church of Protestantism, which the Reformation brought to light, he characterized as one of solefidianism, or salvation by faith alone, to which doctrine the New Church was utterly opposed. The New Church inculcated the religion of charity, while it otherwise developed new phases of the interior life of man. The Old Church read the Apostle's benediction of Christian virtues falsely. It said, "Now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Faith"—whereas, St. Paul wrote, "Now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Charity."

The Professor, during his long and eloquent address, enchained the attention of his auditors. The centennial services of the Swedenborgian Church will be continued to-day; and sermons will be preached, having special reference to the occasion, at the Eleventh-street Church, morning and evening, to-morrow.

Home Missionary Society—The Executive Committee Indorsed.

A meeting was held Thursday morning, in the Bible House, of the Board of Directors of the American Home Missionary Society. The business on hand was the election of an Executive Committee for the ensuing year. Dr. PETERS, Vice President, was called to preside, and as introductory to the business offered prayer. About twenty members were present.

A resolution was offered to reelect the Executive Committee of the last year, which was unanimously adopted. The following are the names of the Committee: Mr. Abijah Fisher, William Patton, D. D., Charles Butler, Esq., Alfred C. Post, M. D., Edwin F. Hatfield, D. D., Mr. Simeon B. Chittenden, Asa D. Smith, D. D., Richard S. Storrs, Jr., D. D., Rev. Joseph P. Thompson. After the election had been held, a motion to adjourn was made and carried. Prayer was offered by Dr. STORRS, of New-Hampshire, and the members dispersed.

☞ The meeting of the children connected with the Universalist Sabbath Schools of the City, which was to have been held at Dr. CHAPIN's Church, yesterday afternoon, did not take place on account of the storm, but was postponed till Tuesday afternoon next.

The Asia brings specie to the amount of $614,193.

The steamship City of Manchester arrived at Liverpool at 3 o'clock morning of Friday the 1st inst.

The United States Mail Steamer Arago arrived at Southampton on the 30th.

The steamer Queen of the South sailed from Southampton Wednesday, 29th ult., for New-York.

The actual news by this arrival is rather limited. From Britain the incidents are the meeting of Parliament, and the election, without opposition, of EVELYN DENISON as Speaker of the House of Commons. The deaths of the Duchess of GLOUCESTER, (GEORGE III.'s daughter,) and of JOHN MACADAM, late M. P. for Glasgow, are noticed.

The Russian Grand Duke CONSTANTIN continued to receive great honor at Paris.

The Queen of Spain's speech to the Cortes mentions the reestablishment of friendly relations between Spain and Rome, and expresses a hope that Mexico will apologize and pay an indemnity, otherwise Spain will take coercive measures.

The rumor is again revived that the King of Denmark will be forced to settle the difficulties of his reign by abdicating.

From the East we have a telegraph announcing the safety of the missing steamer Oneida. Also letters from the pen of Sir JAMES BROOKE, himself confirming the statement of his recent massacre of 2,000 Chinese in Borneo.

Dispatches from the French Ambassador at Madrid announce that the Spanish Government accepts the principle of an arrangement with Mexico.

Le Nord pretends that it knows the intentions of the French Government as regards China. The French authorities will formally demand a permanent embassy at Pekin, and in case of a refusal, will endeavor, in concert with the English forces, to penetrate to the capital by water, and there dictate terms to the Chinese Government.

The London Gazette announces that the Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. CHARLES BAYLOR as Consul at Manchester for the United States of America.

Lady FRANKLIN has resolved to send out another and a final expedition in search of whatever trace may exist of the lost crews of the Erebus and Terror. A screw yacht, the Fox, now lying at Aberdeen, has been purchased, and the command is to be given to Capt. M'CLINTOCK, who has already distinguished himself even among the adventurous band of Arctic navigators.

We read in the Athenæum:

"A scientific exploring expedition, consisting of three or four persons, is about to proceed, under the auspices of the Government, through the western portion of British America. It is intended that the party should proceed from Lake Superior to Lake Winnipeg and from thence through the country lying between the northern branch of the Saskatchewan and the boundary of the United States. The Government is desirous of making the expedition as scientifically useful as possible, and with this view, the assistance and counsel of the Royal Society have been solicited. The council has appointed a committee to act in the matter, and a report has been drawn up. The expedition is to be commanded by Mr. JOHN PALLISER."

The Paris Pays denies the announcement of the London Globe, that the Newfoundland Legislature refuses to ratify the Fisheries Convention which has been made by France and England. According to article 21, the Convention in question was to be ratified by the Newfoundland Assembly and by the English Parliament, and the Pays says that although some very special objections of a kind quite open to argument have been taken by the committee of the Legislative Council, no vote has yet been given.

The New British Parliament—Election of Speaker.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Thursday, May 30.

From the London Times.

The first session of the fifth Parliament summoned during the reign of Her present Majesty formally commenced this day. The opening of a new Parliament, at all times a great constitutional ceremony, is at the present juncture peculiarly momentous. The Government which so recently brought the country through an arduous war, and, in concert with its allies, restored peace to Europe, having been defeated in the House of Commons on a secondary question of foreign policy, deemed it expedient to counsel the Sovereign to dissolve Parliament, that the opinion of the constituencies might be elicited on the decision pronounced by their representatives. To the appeal thus made to them the constituencies have given an emphatic and unmistakable response, at once completely indorsing the acts of the censured Ministry, and largely recruiting the strength and spirit of their followers. Meanwhile the China question, which had precipitated the dissolution, has assumed a graver and more menacing aspect, demanding on the part of the Executive and the Legislature the exercise of increased energy and firmness. But, not only is the new Parliament ushered into existance apparently on the eve of a war with the Celestial Empire, but most important measures of internal improvement are generally believed to be impending. Besides the many schemes of administrative, legal and social reform to which our renovated Legislature have to address itself, the task of revising its own constitution, in connection with the amendment of the national representation also lies before it; and should the expectations of the country in this respect be fulfilled, the present Parliament is destined to receive the historical appellation of the "last Parliament convoked under the first Reform Bill."

But little pomp and circumstance, however, marked the inaugural sitting of the reconstituted Legislature; and by any but a sober-minded and eminently peaceful people so remarkable an absence of glittering pageantry and splendid forms would be regarded as singularly out of keeping with the strong and anxious national interest which such an occasion could not fail to awaken. Irrespective of the recentness of the last happy event in the Royal household, it is not in accordance with general usage for the Sovereign to attend in person at the first sitting of a new Parliament. The election of a Speaker for the House of Commons, the swearing in of members in both chambers, and a few other preliminaries incidental to the reconstitution of the two assemblies, generally occupy the attention about a week, and in particular the ceremony of the Queen's Speech, previous to which, of course, no business of any importance is transacted.

Before 2 o'clock a considerable concourse had collected round the entrance to the House of Lords, for which purpose the doors of the House were thrown open at 1 o'clock. The interior of the House of Lords presented an array of all that exists in beauty, the gravity dignity of the peerage, the beauty of the female aristocracy, the gravity dignity of the judicial bench

Arrival of the Russian Grand Duke Constantine in Paris.

Paris (April 30) Correspondence of the London Times.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE arrived here this afternoon at 5 o'clock, and passed along the Boulevards at 5½. He was received at the railroad station with the ceremonial described in my letter of Tuesday, and from which, therefore, there has been no deviation. Several of the houses along the Boulevards were decorated with flags, in which the Russian colors were mingled. From 4 or 4 o'clock the great thoroughfares leading to the Lyons Railway station were crowded with the curious, who were anxious to catch a sight of a real Russian Prince, particularly of one to whom popular report attributed the stern features of his family. The Grand Duke sat it an open carriage drawn by four horses, with Prince NAPOLEON on his left. Both were in uniform, the Grand Duke as an Admiral, with a blue riband and star. Prince Napoleon wore the dress of a General of Division, and displayed the grand riband and star of the Legion of Honor. The carriage in which they were seated passed along at a walking pace, so that a good view was had of the Duke by the people, who thronged the footways and the balconies of the houses. The day was rather cold, but otherwise fine, and the two Princes were enveloped in cloaks, which were thrown back at the shoulders. There was no cheering on the Boulevards, but the spectators in the streets saluted by taking off their hats as the carriage passed, and the Grand Duke acknowledged the salute by touching his cocked hat with his open hand. Indeed, he ceased hardly for a moment returning the salute. The carriage in which the Princes rode was preceded by a detachment of guides, and officers belonging to the Imperial Household rode on both sides. Another carriage followed, with the functionaries who received him at the railroad station; in a third were deposited the ponderous person of Marshal MAGNAN and the more slim forms of his aides-de-camp; and a fourth conveyed the Russian officers of the suite of the Grand Duke. The rear was brought up by a squadron of guides. It was perhaps owing to the coldness of the day that neither the Grand Duke nor the Prince were in expression of much animation. The Russian Prince is rather a middle-looking young man. He is of fair complexion, with small light whiskers, and a thin, fair moustache. The Princes proceeded to the Tuileries by the Rue Royale at the same slow pace. Prince NAPOLEON received the Duke at the railway station, but did not, as I stated, he would not, go to Toulon to meet him.

The Queen of Spain's Speech to the Cortes—Relations with Mexico, etc.

The Debats publishes an analysis of the Royal speech, which will be read by General MARFARI, in the Queen's name, on the 1st of May, at the opening of the Spanish Cortes. The speech is drawn up by M. Pacal.

It will announce the reestablishment of a good understanding between Spain and Rome, and renewal of friendly relations with the Court of Russia. The hope is expressed that the difference with Mexico will be amicably settled, but not unless the honor of Spain is satisfied, and the interests of Spaniards in Mexico guaranteed in future, and an indemnity paid to those who have suffered. Should the conditions not be granted, Spain, despite her sincere wish for peace, will not hesitate to have recourse to coercive measures.

The Queen calls the attention of the Cortes to the internal condition of the country. Peace and order prevail everywhere. A veil of oblivion is to be thrown over the past.

The difficulties caused by the high price of provisions have been happily overcome by a series of well-combined measures. The loan is especially mentioned as having enabled the Government to act without complying with the enormous exactions of Spanish capitalists. The conditions of the loan have been faithfully fulfilled.

The Queen will recommend a series of political and financial reforms; a bill for the reform of the organization of the Senate will be brought forward very early in the session, as also a bill for reforming the regulations of the two Chambers. The Senate, as now constituted, consists exclusively of members appointed by the Queen for life. It is proposed to introduce a new element into this great body, which will give it greater authority and add to its lustre. The Senate would lose nothing if it comprised a certain number of hereditary Senators, selected from the Grandees of Spain and possessors of large territorial fortunes. The fortune would be the dotation of the title, and would descend from generation to generation, with the title, to the oldest sons of the Senatorial families. The existing regulations of the Senate and of the Chamber of Deputies have engendered abuses, which continually impede the public service and the progress of the Government, and will ultimately throw discredit upon the Parliamentary system.

Finally, the speech from the throne will give some explanations on the bills that will be presented by the Government for the regulation of the finances, with a view to establish the financial system upon the principles of economical science and the wisdom of experience.

The Queen will inform the Cortes that the plans of the Minister of Finance will be submitted to them at the same time as the budget for 1858.

Treaty Between Prussia and Switzerland.

In a letter from Berne we find the following: "The adhesion of the Prussian Government has not been received. It alone is wanting to enable the Paris Conference to complete the work of conciliation."

I can guarantee to you the correctness of the information I now send you respecting the proposed arrangement with Prussia, as I have it from a person who has read the project.

The document is drawn up in the form of a treaty between Prussia and Switzerland, under the express guarantee of Austria, England, France and Russia, and the object of it is to prevent a disturbance of the peace of Europe.

The 1st Article of the project is very categorical, and is couched in these terms:

His Majesty the King of Prussia renounces for himself and for his successors for ever all claim to the sovereignty which Article 23 of the Treaty of Vienna of 1815 assured to him over the Principality of Neufchatel.

This stipulation is formal, and does not stipulate any reserve or restriction.

The 2d Article qualifies the position of Neufchatel towards Switzerland and towards foreign States. Neufchatel is recognized as a sovereign and independent State; it will continue to enjoy the same rights and guarantees as any other sovereign State of the Swiss Confederation, as was stipulated in the declaration made at Vienna on the 20th of March, 1815.

This article, therefore, confirms the full independence of the Canton of Neufchatel, and its rights of constitution.

The 3d article is thus conceived: "The Confederation will pay to the King of Prussia, the sum of 1,000,000 francs."

"Nothing is said about why this sum is paid, and it is worthy of observation that the word indemnity is not mentioned, probably purposely, in the treaty.

The other articles may be summed up as follows: The Confederation will proclaim a general amnesty for all political and military offences, and offences of the press relating to the events of September 3, 1856. This amnesty will comprise all militiamen, as well natives of the cantons as foreigners, who left the country to elude joining the last Federal call to arms. No prosecution can be commenced in the civil or criminal courts against persons for being implicated in the events of September. The Confederation itself will provide for the expenses caused by the recent events, and the State of Neufchatel will only have to pay its proportionate share of the money contingent. No special tax is to be imposed upon any class of individuals for this purpose. The church property which in 1848, was incorporated with the fortune of the State cannot be applied for any other object, and the revenues are to be applied to those particular objects. The funds of charitable institutions arising from private donations, such as those of Baron DE PYRAZ and the Fourchaux Hospital, cannot be employed for other purposes, and shall continue to be employed henceforth according to the intentions of the donors.

Such is the faithful tenor of the project.

THE CHINA WAR.

Release of the Steamer Queen by the Chinese—Coolly Revolt—Great Loss of Life—Insurrection of Chinese at Sarawak—Account by Rajah Brooke.

Our advices from Hong-Kong are to March 15.

No occurrence of importance has taken place on the river. The Chinese fired rockets into the Tartarian Fort at long range without effect, and it could not be ascertained what damage their boats suffered from the shot returned by the fort.

Hong Kong remained quiet. The rumors of proximate dangers still continued prevalent.

On the 16th of April the Company's steamer [illegible] land, at Tsang Sunnyi, [illegible] Mandarin [illegible] The Auckland [illegible] the bay where they were, but the [illegible] from the shore, and, [illegible] A battery, on the shore, consisting 18 guns, was captured and the guns spiked. The casualties on the British side consisted of one killed and four wounded of the Auckland's men.

M. BOURBILLON, the French Minister, had arrived, and had proceeded in his Imperial Majesty's ship Capricieuse.

The United States steamer San Jacinto left for the Pratas Shoal on the 10th March, to look after an American whaler, the Alice Mondell, that was wrecked on the 7th inst.

On the night of the 6th March the bakery lately belonging to EMINGE or ALLUM was burnt by incendiaries. The present owner had a large contract for bread for the army and navy on hand. About 700 barrels of flour were destroyed.

Pekin Gazette come down to the 11th Feb. They contain reports of some successes of the Imperial troops over the insurgents. There is still no mention made of the state of affairs at Canton.

From Shanghae we learn that a band of rebels had burnt Hohow, in a great tea district in the province Kiangsu, and 15 cheps of Congou were destroyed.

Along the coast all was quiet.

From Canton a good many of the native merchants had lately come down to Hong Kong to settle accounts, and in adjustment had taken over goods to some extent that were stored in their pack-houses.

The Seizure of the Steamer Queen by the Chinese.

From the Canton Mail of Feb. 26.

Another river steamer, the Queen, has fallen a prey to our Chinese passengers and crew, through the culpable negligence of the present and captain—the former having her property manned and officered, the latter in not adopting the necessary precautions against such an occurrence. The Queen left this harbor for Macao on Monday at noon, and had arrived by 5 o'clock off the southwest end of Tai yu shan, (Lantao,) when Capt. Wyse, with his engineer, and Mr. Weir, also an engineer, sat down to dinner, Mr. GERARD OLIVERLY, a passenger, being likewise in the cabin. The upper deck was deserted except by the steersman, and the arm chest kept there was consequently at the disposal of the Chinese, who did not fail to avail themselves of its contents. What became of the steersman is not known, but the steward's gangway door was found aft, and, with the muskets, was carried into the cabin. Mr. OLIVERLY had his thigh bone fractured by a grapeshot; but, though severely wounded, he was not entirely disabled, so that with his revolver he managed to shoot two of his assailants; then, having bound up his leg, he threw a chair overboard, and took to the water, supporting himself upon the chair until picked up by a Portuguese boat, by, in which he was taken to Macao. The Queen had on board about 120 chests of opium, besides other cargo. The steamer has been taken to Chun Chunu, and, is there at anchor, surrounded by a fleet of fifty-seven mandarin junks; her female passengers are reported to be alive and well. Several respectable Chinese were also passengers in her.

Chinese Revolts and Great Loss of Life.

From the Singapore Straits Times, March 21.

A boat arrived at Singapore yesterday morning, having on board nine of the crew of the Peruvian ship Carmen, which vessel left Swatow with two hundred Chinese Coolies for Callao. During the passage down the China Sea, some time at night, the coolies rose on mates, but were driven below, and the hatches closed. The Chinese secured down below set fire to the ship, which was soon in a mass of flames. The crew took to the boat. At this time some of the coolies had managed to force the hatchways and were observed passing up the rigging, but the mast shortly afterwards fell over into the sea. The boat in which was the Captain had returned to the vessel to get a sail, but just as it reached the vessel, the latter went down, and the boat must have been taken down with the sinking ship, as nothing was seen of the Captain or the people in the boat, although the mate remained close by for nearly four hours. The greater part of the coolies must have been suffocated by the smoke—the whole perished, except as interpreted.

From the Friend of China, March 18.

On Wednesday, the 11th March, the Gulnare, a British ship, 1,100 tons register, Capt. WARNER, left Swatow, with cooly passengers from Havana. At 7½ A. M., on the following morning, the coolies in a body attacked the third mate and sentry in the fore part of the ship. The captain, officers and crew immediately rushed out and rescued the third mate and sentry, who were seriously wounded. The coolies fought with fearful desperation, and in some instances were fairly cut to pieces before they were driven below. Finding they could not regain the deck, the coolies broke up the berths, and set the ship on fire main, mizzen, and poop and hatchways, but when the leaders in the incendiarism were shot down, they immediately extinguished the fires. The third mate and sentry were the only two of the crew who were seriously wounded. Twenty-seven coolies were killed and wounded—ten killed, three drowned, and four wounded. Some have since jumped overboard. The Gulnare arrived here yesterday.

THE COOLY EMIGRATION.

From the Singapore Free Press.

If Cooly emigration is to be allowed at all, it must be put upon an entirely different footing from what it is at present. It is very evident from all we have heard that in nine of these shipments from Chinese ports of the Havannah and countries in South America, many of the coolies are procured by a system of kidnapping, and are sent away against their will. Hence the frequent risings amongst them. Until the whole system is altered no merchant who has the least regard for his own reputation ought to participate in it, directly or indirectly. Any person lending himself to the continuance of such an infamous business ought to be held up to the contempt and detestation of the public.

The Chinese Insurrection at Sarawak, Borneo.

GRAPHIC LETTER FROM SIR JAMES BROOKE.

The London Times has been favored with the following letter from Sir JAMES BROOKE addressed to a warm personal friend, and describing the events of the late insurrection, and the steps taken to suppress it:

BARIDAN, Sunday, March 15.

I may now relate more circumstantially the events of the last few weeks. Sarawak was as peaceful as it had ever been, and there was no cause to excite dissatisfaction among the Chinese or raise suspicion in our minds of any hostile design; yet a conspiracy had been formed which had its ramifications in Singapore and in China. A fortnight ago TEMENGONG JALIM, last arrived at Sarawak, and some criminals, who had been banished the country, secretly returned from Singapore. I had been unwell for some days, and on the night of the 13th retired early to bed. My servant was sleeping in a room near mine, and Mr. STEEL and NAKODAH COMPIED a small bungalow just by. Between 12 and 1 o'clock I was awakened by yells and shots, and, seizing my sword and revolver, I opened a window and saw that the house was surrounded. The noise told me it was by Chinese. I opened door by door in the hope of finding means for escape, but in vain. I told PEMPY [his native servant] that our deaths were at hand, and, as the last hope, went down to the bathing-room, which was under repair. The door was not fastened. I opened it gently, and, seeing the way clear, ran across the lawn to the creek on the right hand of the house, and took the water close under the bows of the boat which had brought the murderers to their bloody work. I carried my sword and pistol across with me. Glad was I to touch ground on the far side, though not above 50 yards. I struggled through the deep mud, and lay down exhausted and panting in the road. Recovering breath, I got to the nearest house, and, launching a canoe, pulled up to the Datoo Bendar's kampong. All was in confusion. I was too exhausted to do much, and Hercules himself could not have restored courage or order to such a panic-stricken crowd. Here CHOOKEMANE joined me bleeding from a severe sword cut in the arm. He believed his wife to be dead, and we both apprehended that the massacre would be general. Finding all hope of restoring affairs at the Bandar idle, I pulled to the kampongs above, and persuaded the people to secure their women and valuables in prahus, and to cross to the opposite or left bank of the river, so as to prevent the possibility of their attacking them by land. My house, ARRANG'S and MUHAMMAD'S were long before this in flames. We got the women and children across the river, and ARRANG, CHOOKEMANE, and myself retired to the same side, to the house of NAKODAH BEYAK. Here CHOOKEMANE joined us with the intelligence that after an hour's defence our fort or palisade had been taken, and with all our guns, small arms, ammunition, &c. It had been defended by CAYAHAN, with four men, and two prisoners; three of the defenders were killed, one or two wounded, and CAYAHAN himself had been grazed by a spear in his side. MIDDLEMOST, SERAMA, RUSSELL and PERRY dropped in one after another. The bright fires went out, and the dull morning broke at length, but only disclosing to us the hopeless state of affairs. We remained quietly at Inkode Bryaka, doing what we could to animate the natives, and to prepare for such a defence as our means allowed, should we be attacked.

I may here relate the fate and misfortunes of our fellow-sufferers. Poor HARRY NICHOLETTS was murdered on the grass, trying to reach my house. CHOOKEMANE and his wife escaped by their bath-room door. She ran first, and he protected her retreat with a spear in his hand, but, in passing the Stable, one of these villains rushed from the opposite side and cut her down. Her husband jerked his spear into the miscreant's back, but with a twist of his body he wrenched it out, and, seizing the shaft, he struggled to get the spear. Suddenly, however, letting go with his right hand, in which he held a short sword, he cut CHOOKEMANE across the fleshy part of the arm. Both staggered, both let go the spear, and CHOOKEMANE, weak with loss of blood, and believing his wife dead, staggered away, and reached me. She, poor and beautiful, lay for twelve hours weltering in her blood, senseless and calm in this extremity, then faint symptoms of life showed itself. We saw no other way than to carry her to the house, and, with the assistance of the Chinese, we carried her to the house which protected it; another two hour stage. Now her sufferings, and those of our company, nature has it to be, [illegible] the Resident of the Dayaks had sent a party of protection; but [illegible] permission to carry her to his house. [illegible] she should [illegible] to perish. At [illegible] was granted, [illegible] followed [illegible] and is now, [illegible] ton's house [illegible] and in the same manner as the others. He escaped with difficulty. His poor little child lies in a bakery till the burning rafters fell about him, and, from her concealment, saw the assailants kicking about the head of her eldest child. The mother was paralyzed; she wished, she said, to rush out, but could not move. The youngest child was murdered and thrown into the flames, where poor WELLINGTON'S remains were likewise consumed, his head borne off in triumph alone arresting his previous murder. The day broke, as I said, and shortly after I heard that the Chinese had assured the survivors of safety; that they had communicated with the Bishop, and sent for HELMS and BURRELL. I then, hopeless of doing good, started for the Stole, a small stream which lies its outlet far below the town; it was a wild walk; we swam the stream, washed out every track of our footsteps in the mud, and took refuge in a mangrove swamp as dark came on. By 8 o'clock two small coats came to carry us away, and in an hour afterwards I was in ABANG BUTONG'S prahu, manned by 40 men, with six smaller boats in company. Our party consisted of ARRANG CROOKSHANK, OTINGLE, MIDDLETON and PARTY, and after the trials and fatigues of the 24 hours, we slept as though misfortune had not overtaken us.

On the morning following I landed at Sabong, and I wish I could explain to you the tender care, the generous sympathy showered upon us. Here we received information that the Chinese, after forcing the Europeans and Datoos into oaths of fealty, had agreed to retire up the river. It was clearly their intention, having, as they thought, disposed of myself and ARRANG, to take the country into their own hands, to be friendly with the Malays and Dyaks, to patronize the Europeans and to encourage them to trade in order to the supply of their own wants. There were two parties requisite to the success of this notable project. My intention was to proceed to Sakarran, to collect as large a force as I could, and with it to retake the town, or to command a base of operations in its vicinity. I awaited, however, the intelligence, and on Sunday, having heard of the retirement of the Chinese, I was again entering the town, when down they came a second time, before we were in any manner prepared to receive them properly. The consequence was, they gained the town before I could land, and I again retired with all the Europeans, with the first intention of proceeding to Sakarran. This was the early evening. I felt the depression of spirits attendant on ill fortune, but I did not show it. There we were, outcasts—women and children and helpless fugitives, to be provided for—the town in flames, and my people without firearms and ammunition, panic stricken, and fleeing with their families. A force from Sakarran was our only hope, and with a base for operations we might rally the people, repent and stand against the enemy. The next morning I was on my way to Lingi, when the steamer here, in sight, I boarded her. SAVAGE was most zealous and active. Here was the very base for our operations we wanted. We drove the miscreants out of the town, found the Datoo in a cluster of prahus, and heard that he had recaptured nine captives, and one of our prahus containing stores of powder, some guns, &c., of which we were in great want. This was the first blow struck at the Chinese. I felt assured the next day would improve our resources and diminish those of our enemies. Their body of men was nearly annihilated, for taking the jungle behind the town or making off by the road, as they had no boats to carry them away, they were cut off by the Dyaks or starved. My next measure was to lay the land Dyaks loose upon them, and within a circuit of 30 miles from Siniawan, Bau and Buie, they were driven into their defences with great loss of life, and all communication between Bau and Siniawan prevented, excepting by means of large parties of armed men. Night and day they were harassed by alarms; every straggler was cut down. In short, it was a guerilla warfare of the most harassing character, and quite shut the enemy up in their two pieces of strength, Bau and Siniawan. The want of food was sure to do the rest, and it was a mere question of time how long they could hold out. Simonang and Bank were each covered, the former by the fort of Baliuah, the latter by its landing place, but early in the month the Chinese again came forth in five prahus and swarming the banks of the river. I was collecting my people and reassuring them after their panic. The Datoo Bandar, on the 9th, was in a single Malay prahu on the look-out at Linda Tunga, when this Chinese party came there. They declined an engagement on the water, but landed and threw up a stockade, which they defended with four guns and manned with about 250 men, armed with muskets and rifles. The Datoo came down himself in a small boat, and by 7 o'clock on the 10th we got off two more large prahus, some 30 Dyak bangkongs as a reserve; other prahus were preparing, and some followed the same evening, but too late. These three prahus ranged themselves in line and dashed at the Chinese stockade, leaped sword in hand, and carried it without a check. The Dyaks cut the Chinese to pieces in the jungle, and the half hour before sunset cost our enemies from 100 to 120 men. Again the remnant was distressed in the jungles. Our party returned; had it ascended the river, no man, woman, or child of our enemies would have escaped death or captive. This defeated party consisted of their picked men, and their two great leaders were killed in the stockade. A party now joined them. On the night of the 11th I heard that Baliuah and Simowan had been strengthened, and, hurrying up the following morning, the intelligence greeted me that Bank was likewise deserted, and had been burned, and that the Chinese were in full retreat towards Samban. This took us by surprise, but our force got upon their trail on the 15th, and after three days desultory fighting, drove them across the frontier with great slaughter, the enemy, however, making a desperate resistance in defence of the women and children, and the efforts of our people not being able to break them. Had twenty-four hours delay intervened to allow a concerted attack, we should have had them all; but as it is we may be thankful, for a mere remnant of the body of Chinese men has escaped, and the capture of the women and children was not to be desired. Even now, however, this wretched mass, driven to the further side of the Sambas River, must suffer great loss, and may altogether perish in the wild jungle for want of food and from exposure. Thus the punishment has been almost as sudden and far more sharp than the treachery and first success of this miscreant body. A thousand and more have been killed in different places, their flourishing settlements destroyed, and not a root tree to cover their dastard heads in the country. The numbers starved in their flight by being lost in the jungle it is difficult to reckon, but it must be considerable, and out of a population of 4,000 or 5,000 certainly not more than 1,000 have escaped, and half this number is composed of women and children. The punishment has been severe. The Chinese will play no further treachery here, and in future we shall prevent their being associated in companies, disarm them, and reduce them to a daily obedience to the laws and a strict surveillance. Sarawak has now passed through the ordeal that Hong Kong is passing through, and Singapore has yet to meet. The country is secure, the authority of Government has been strengthened, the principles on which it is based now look to stability by the fidelity and order of its native population. Our guns have been removed with a portion of our musketry, and the principal loss falls on myself, as CHOOKEMANE and MIDDLETON. For myself, I may say that I never knew the small value of worldly goods till I lost them. I do not pretend to any sentimental cant, even my noble library, my costly plate, or all the decorations and tokens of honor which were once showered upon me and have been lost even more suddenly than they were acquired. Man's happiness consists not in such things, and he destroys the chance of finding it if he persuades himself that it does.

Now, a word more as to the cause of these events. Wherever there is a Chinaman, there is the conceit of supremacy and the desire of dominion. When associated in bodies, as in Sambas formerly, and thence in Sarawak before my arrival, this lust of rule grows stronger. The stringent proceedings of the Dutch have recently thrown many desperate characters into Sarawak, and the miserably feeble Government of Singapore, with its toleration of secret societies, has strengthened the Chinese Kungsi here and given it advisers aware of the state of British affairs and policy. Without such advisers the idea of encouraging trade while murdering the officers of Government would never have entered the head of any of the rude Chinese here, and without the means of livelihood from without and the support of the European community, so mad a project could hardly have been undertaken. To upset the Government by the murder of its principal officers and heads, and to establish other Englishmen to carry on the trade, was the suggestion of Chinese of Singapore, well acquainted with the isolated position of Sarawak, and possessed with the idea that the murder of Sarawak officers and the Sarawak Rajah would be a matter of supreme indifference to the British nation, provided that trade was continued and cottons sold. It was a high compliment to my Government that murdering me with the intention of obtaining power, these stupidly clever Chinese deemed as little change as possible. They forgot the native element, and hence their destruction has come. It was a grand superstructure, cleverly devised by men acquainted with English policy and mode of proceeding, but miserably based as regards the feelings and the ferocity of the native population. I think I have told you that one of TIME TA'S fellow-[illegible], i. e. a follower of the rebel and HUNG leader in China—has since been ascertained to have arrived in the country. It is probable that he was the great Singapore mover and agent, and to all these causes to encourage the attempt to acquire power and plunder by means of treachery and murder may be added the poverty of the Chinese, owing to the scanty yield of gold during the last eight months. I will only add that to penetrate their designs was impossible, and without a clue to the design and its advisers their attempt was not conceivable. True, some rumors had been afloat three months before, that under guise of a religious procession the Kungsi people were to force the jail, in order to liberate some prisoners belonging to their body; but the scheme did not then embrace my life, as I was in Singapore. CHOOKEMANE took precautions, and on my return I made inquiry into the matter, without eliciting any tangible evidence to warrant me in disturbing the peace of the country. To guard against such a conspiracy is impossible; it dismisses all opportunity course. We are really not much hurt; our losses will soon, but will recover, as even now, owing to the speedy and complete destruction of the Kungsi, confidence is not wanting. The fear of the company is trifling. It is fortunate that you will hear of our disaster and its retrieval at the same time; and for myself, I may say that I am in good health and spirits, and ready to rough it with the best of them. Our ladies behaved with great fortitude and resignation. CHARLES [illegible] good fortune. I have written [illegible] superfluous. [illegible]

[illegible] Borneo must have an excellent effect on other populations. The only pity is that the English did not do it instead of the Malays. Sir W. ROGER'S going to Borneo must produce the best results.

The British Expeditions against China—ITS STRENGTH—ISLAND OF FORMOSA TO BE DAITURED—THE WAR TO BE PROSECUTED WITH GREAT VIGOR.

From the Paris Pays.

It seems that the strength of the expedition will be raised from 15,000 troops to 20,000, and that measures will be taken to reinforce the regiments at their full strength. Should the Chinese refuse to conclude an arrangement, it is not thought that the war could terminate in a single campaign. It is said that the English have the intention of commencing with the capture of the island of Formosa, separated from the mainland by the straits of the same name. This island belongs to the province of Fou KIAN, which adjoins that of KOUANG-TUNG, the capital of which is Canton. The island of Formosa is 200 English miles long and 100 miles in breadth; it is rich, fertile, and very healthy; its principal town is Thakoum. The island, which is garrisoned by 12,000 Chinese, would form an admirable spot for the establishment of hospitals, depots, &c., and it would admit of being easily fortified. The Court of Pekin attaches great importance to the possession of Formosa, which, during the second half of the Seventeenth Century, was the scene of a violent struggle; it was finally annexed to the Chinese Empire in 1683 by the great conqueror, KANGE HI.

From the London Times.

The events of the next few months will bring with them their own instruction as to the policy which it will now be advisable to pursue; but there can be no doubt as to the imperfections of our last Convention. That it did not fulfill the conditions desirable, in terminating the outrageous abasement of Europeans, that it did not effectually bring the Chinese to a sense of our value so as to secure, at least a footing of equality, or adequately provide for that expansion of commerce which would carry such advantages to both nations at home, is now sufficiently manifest. Its defects, in fact, were plainly exhibited in the non-execution of one of its own stipulations; for, whereas it was expressly agreed that we should no longer stand excluded from the city of Canton, the Cantonese were allowed to break their own promises and treaty, in the face of the very instructions which had been dictated to control them. For the future we want exemption from insult and security for trade—nothing more. Any territorial cession will only be demanded for one of these purposes. We desire such establishments as will enable us to conduct in a proper fashion an enormous trade at the distance of many thousand miles from home. We desire that in these transactions we may be no longer exposed to offence from a barbarous city populous enough to degrade us as evidence of its own superiority; and we expect such a settlement of affairs as will relieve us hereafter from any recurrence of embarrassments like the present.

From the Same Paper.

Things have now come to a crisis, and nothing is left but to punish the outrages of this faithless race by the use of the whole strength of the Empire. We must recognize the present as no "little war," for we are fighting three hundred millions of people distributed over half a Asia, and abetted by multitudes in some of the most important dependencies of the Empire. Happily, the news of the peace with Persia seems to have arrived at Bushire, and there are no accounts of further hostilities. As soon, then, as the ratification is completed, the force under Sir JAMES OUTRAM might at once be shipped for China, where it would arrive long before the troops from Bombay could complete their voyage. In the present time it only takes ten days by telegraph to communicate with Bushire, so that the order might be received and acted on almost immediately. As to the mutiny in India, which looked so alarming, we trust it may be considered as at an end, for the most unruly regiment has been disbanded without bloodshed. With the war in Persia concluded, India tranquil, Europe at peace, and our armouries and ports stocked with warlike stores and ships, there is every facility for carrying through the Chinese war with prompitude and success. Vigor in the commanders and effective support from home are, however, needed, unless we would see the prosperity, and even the existence, of our Asiatic Empire, seriously endangered.

The Attitude of the United States in the War with China.

From the London Post, (Ministerial.)

It appears from the last intelligence received from America that the Cabinet of Mr. BUCHANAN has distinctly refused to commit itself in any way to the European policy which is about to be carried out in China. We are informed by a New-York contemporary that the British Government, through Lord MALMESBURY, had asked the alliance of the United States in the prosecution of the war with China, at the same time suggesting that moral cooperation was all that was required, and "that all the fighting would be done by England and France." To this proposal General CASS, we are further informed, has given a decided negative. The United States Government, no doubt, has a perfect right to adopt a policy of isolation in China or anywhere else, and therefore the people of this country should be scarcely be justified in taking in an unfriendly spirit the refusal which General CASS has hinted upon these grounds—the non-recognition of the MONROE doctrine by European diplomacy, and the probability that the United States would gain nothing from the aid and moral support given by them to England and France. The course, however, which the Cabinet at Washington proposes to adopt—aid to give to England and France that practical moral support which the Government in terms refuses. Hon. W. B. RANKS, of Philadelphia, an able lawyer, has been offered the post of United States Commissioner or Minister to China; a naval squadron, including two large steam-frigates, has been ordered to the Chinese waters to support America's moral force diplomacy. In the unhappy contest which has arisen—and which from every mail appears to be receiving new features of aggravation—the American Commissioner, in a position of isolation, will certainly have an extremely difficult part to play. In the first place, what will be the effect of the presence of the American squadron at the scene of hostilities? To negotiate in the midst of a fierce and sanguinary war is an expectation which only Sambo's mind can seriously entertain. Diplomacy will have no opportunity of making its voice heard until stern vengeance and adequate punishment have been inflicted upon the murderous and cowardly Chinese. The United States vessels might of necessity act as a squadron of observation, and if they should go nearer close to the scene of operations, some provocation—some accident—to one Chinese shot—may compel them, though with reluctance, to change their position of diplomatic neutrality—to cast off the mask of consistent neutrality—to cast off open and undisguised hostility. Of course, it cannot for a moment be supposed that the presence of the United States squadron would be permitted in any way to interfere with the operations of the naval forces of this country. Should, for instance, a blockade of the ports of China be declared, the neutral squadron would, we conclude, be bound to observe it. It would seem, upon the whole, that the policy of the United States Government is to have a Commissioner and a sufficient force on the spot for the purpose of meeting any emergency, and for the purpose of watching the results of the contest in which England is engaged. This may be deemed to be almost a work of supererogation, when it is known as a matter of history that England, in dealing with China, has negotiated for no privileges in which she has denied participation to foreign relations.

But what is the extent of the cooperation or moral force which England expected at the hands of the United States? Before the recent outbreak at Canton the relations between foreigners generally and the Chinese authorities had been anything but satisfactory. For the purpose of placing foreign trade and intercourse on some more honorable and secure basis, the Government of this country intended to propose to France and the United States the expediency of sending a joint embassy to the Emperor of China. This intention obviously could not be carried into effect, so long as England, by the act of the late President, was without a representative at Washington. But diplomatic relations having been restored, and in the meantime an unhappy dispute having arisen at Canton, the offer intended to have been made under very different circumstances is at length communicated to the United States Government, and is distinctly refused. Would we may ask, the same result have happened if the offer had been made at the period originally intended? We suspect that the United States Government would have been inclined to forget the non-recognition of the Monroe doctrine, and would have cheerfully given the moral support of their aid to the diplomacy of England and of France. Now however, they are willing to incur great expense, and to run great risk of war, in the hope that, in the chapter of accidents, they may be enabled to obtain advantages which would be as certainly and securely theirs if not one of their vessels had left an American port. If England and France, by successful operations, should establish their right to have an Ambassador resident at Pekin, the United States Commissioner, following in their wake, would claim, and no doubt obtain, the same privilege. This policy of isolation, we confess, appears to be selfish, and unworthy of a great and enlightened people. It is, however, gratifying to observe that the United States Government is not disposed to adopt or act upon the GLADSTONE or COBDEN view of the Chinese dispute. If the arguments of these gentlemen were valid—if the course pursued by Sir JOHN DOWNING were not sanctioned by international law—the Government of the United States would be bound to demand compensation for the destruction of the American factory—an act which would then be one of just retaliation, occasioned by an illegally provoked war. In spite of the exclusiveness of the United States, we believe that the presence of the American Commissioner and squadron in the Chinese seas will not be alone and altogether without moral weight. It will tell the savage and barbarous people of China that the civilized nations of the world are determined no longer to submit to insult, [illegible] and commerce must be [illegible]

There seems to be growing daily the general belief in this Union, if we may judge from the annual meetings of the Benevolent Society, and of their general and parent Association, the Amalgamation Union. During the past Winter two Societies have given concerts for charitable purposes, all of which have commanded large audiences, and been received with merited favor. It does far the sanative effects that should follow such place, that at the very first concert one class of music, the most popular, and which certainly has been written for the purpose of being sung. The principal solo part was sustained by Miss BRAINERD, who sang sweetly, but timidly. An accompaniment, too, ought to be similar—instead is an industrious manner. If the score from which they played is Dr. Lowell's, we recommend that Mr. BERROW rewrite it; if it is Mr. BERROW's, we advise an appeal to somebody else—Dr. Lowell, for instance. There is nothing intrinsically beautiful in more at sight.

The tenor singer was evidently laboring under a severe cold, and must therefore be excused for singing decidedly out of tune. The other members of the Society were sufficient for their several roles. The chorus was generally efficient. Altogether the performance was a creditable one to the members, and will benefit their Society.

Dramatic.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Two new pieces were produced here on Monday night with success. The first is called "Nature and Art," and is simply a translated version of Mr. CHARLES READE's dramatic sketch, entitled "Art." It would have been decent, we submit, to have mentioned this fact in connection with the name of the adapter, Mr. H. C. CONWAY. The plot of the piece is as old as the hills, and has been used by French and English dramatists in a number of ways. It is the familiar story of a young man who falls in love with an actress; of an actress who, at the solicitation of parents, tries to dispel her lover by assuming a coarseness which is not her nature; of a violent revulsion; of a parental alarm, and of a general reconciliation. The dialogue of the play is mostly the property of Mr. READE, and is therefore good, although at times too polished and delicate for the glaring atmosphere of the stage.

Mr. CONWAY has performed his task with ability, and has succeeded with very little labor (for very little was needed) in constructing a two-act drama of a thoroughly enjoyable character. Miss KEENE plays the heroine (created in the original as the famous Mrs. Gaskell) with unusual versatility and grace. She is very ably supported by Mr. BURNETT and Mr. LENEHAN, both of whom are actors of increasing ability. By the aid of these artists, and excellent stage appointments, "Nature and Art" is rendered the most agreeable, as it is decidedly the best written piece of the season.

The second piece on the programme is a kind of burlesque called "Variety," similar to, if not identical with the piece brought out by Miss KEENE at the Metropolitan Theatre under the same name. It is intended merely as a vehicle for some excellent pictures, and is perhaps sufficient for the purpose. The tableaux are beautiful, especially those in the Keller vein. Unfortunately there are some speaking characters, and it is not our privilege to praise what they say. We are aware that nothing is more difficult than to write good burlesque dialogue, but the effort to write anything so bad as this must indeed be prodigious. The music, and the scenery, and the costumes, carry the piece through, and for these we are willing to forget what we consider the most cruel case of literary distress we have ever wept over.

Author's Benefit.

Mr. CHARLES GAYLER, a gentleman who has done a great deal for the amusement of the public, takes a Complimentary Benefit to night at the Broadway Theatre, where his piece, the "Son of the Night," will be repeated. In addition to this attractive melodrama, Mr. BLAKE has volunteered his services for the occasion, and will play his great character in the "Last Men"—one of the most remarkable impersonations of the age.

CONCERT.—Miss CH. WILMORE takes her first complimentary benefit to night at Niblo's Saloon. The programme is unusually attractive.

The National Quarantine Convention at Philadelphia.

This body, on Thursday afternoon, was occupied in the adoption, section by section, of the report of their Business Committee, which we have already published.

THIRD DAY.

The Convention was called to order at the usual hour to day, Dr. JEWELL in the Chair. The minutes of yesterday were then read. This operation consumed considerable time, as the report of the Business Committee, which was under discussion yesterday, had been so altered and amended as to mix things up a good deal. Several corrections were made by Mr. HASWELL, of New York; Dr. COMBIE, of Philadelphia; Dr. KNIGHT, of Baltimore, and others. The minutes were then adopted.

The further report of the Business Committee, received yesterday, and to be found above, was then postponed for the present.

A letter from Mr. A. N. BELL, of Brooklyn, N. Y., containing suggestions on the subject of Quarantine, was received and read. The letter states that in the writer's opinion, well persons should have immediate freedom; warehouses to be prepared for infected goods, with provisions for ventilation, &c.; anchorage ground at a safe distance from warehouses and crowded neighborhoods; also a marine hospital at a safe distance from warehouses and from crowded neighborhoods. The receipt of the letter was noted on the minutes. Another letter of somewhat similar character, was also received from Mr. D. E. W. LILLIE, of New-York.

The report of the Business Committee, as follows, was then taken up:

The Committee on Business respectfully present the following additional report:

They recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That no member of this Convention shall speak more than twice on the same subject, nor longer than ten minutes at each time.

They propose, as a substitute for the fourth proposition, previously reported, and which had been again referred to them, the following:

4. That the circumstances alluded to consist, in vitiated states of the atmosphere, from local causes, during seasons marked by peculiar meteorological conditions.

With the view of procuring a uniformity in quarantine regulations throughout the several ports of the United States, the assembling of another and probably several Conventions similar to the present one, will be required.

To provide for the assembling of such a Convention in 1858, it is suggested that the President, Vice-President, and Secretary of this Convention, with a Committee of one member from each State represented in this Convention, be continued after our final adjournment, as Commissioners for the purpose of taking the necessary steps for the call of a Convention next year: Provided, however, that their functions shall cease immediately upon the assembling and organization of the Convention of 1858.

It is suggested also to change the name of the Convention from Quarantine to Sanitary.

The first of these resolutions being before the Convention, Mr. JOHN H. DIXON, of this City, opposed its passage. Dr. COMBIE spoke in its favor. Dr. JOHNS, of New Orleans, and Dr. WEISTMAN, of Boston, also made some remarks, after which the resolution was lost.

The substitute for the 4th proposition was amended, and passed in the following shape:

4. That the circumstances alluded to consist in vitiated states of the atmosphere, from local causes in connection with peculiar meteorological conditions.

The next proposition was passed with a transposition of a word or two, as above.

The remaining propositions were amended and passed as above.

On the proposition to call the Convention a "Sanitary" instead of "Quarantine" quite an amusing debate arose.

Mr. CHAPIN holding in his hand the printed report of which the word "Quarantine" was used, "Mr. President," asked that the word be spelt with an L. He had heard of Sanitary and Sentinary, but never of Sentinary, and as the word came from Sentina, he thought that the proper way of spelling it.

Dr. COMBIE jumped up before Dr. CHAPIN had done, and attempted to speak, but was prevented from doing so by the latter, who, when he CHAPIN had finished, Dr. COMBIE explained that it was a typographical error.

After remarks and counter-remarks from several other gentlemen, the resolution, on motion of Dr. COMBIE, was amended so as to make the name of the Convention "Quarantine and Sanitary," which it will be in future.

The further report of the Business Committee was then taken up. The first, second, third, fourth and fifth propositions were debated by Mr. JOHN H. DIXON, and others—Mr. DIXON, moving to strike out, and Dr. JOHNS, of New-Orleans, and others, attempted to amend them, but they were finally postponed indefinitely.

The sixth proposition, which read very awkwardly in the report, was verbally amended and passed. The seventh and eighth propositions were, also slightly amended and passed.

The preambles to the different portions of the report were then adopted.

The Chair announced the following gentlemen as the Committee, to be continued after the adjournment of the Convention, to take the necessary steps to call a Convention next year: Messrs. Wightman of Mass.; Biddle of Penn.; Snow of R. I.; Haswell of N. Y.; Thompson of Del.; Keap of Md.; Dougherty of N. J.; Selden of Va.; and Lindsay of La.

The Convention then took a recess of five minutes, in order to allow the delegations to choose a representative to give in their votes in the final adoption of the entire report of the Business Committee.

On reassembling the delegations were called, as follows:

Voting Aye.—Massachusetts—Boston Board of Health, Boston Port Physician, Beaver Marine Hospital, Rhode Island—Providence Board of Health, Providence Medical Association. New-York—Board of Health, New-Jersey—Newark Board of Health, Camden Medical Society, Pennsylvania—Philadelphia Board of Health, Philadelphia College of Physicians, Philadelphia Center Medical Society. Delaware—Wilmington Board of Health, Medical Association of Wilmington. Maryland—Baltimore Board of Health, Baltimore Medical and Surgical Society, Baltimore Pathological Society, Baltimore Board of Trade.

Voting No.—Virginia—Norfolk Board of Health, Norfolk City Councils.

The Vote.—Louisiana—New-Orleans Common Council, New-Orleans Board of Health.

The Chair having been 16 votes in favor of the final adoption of the report, 2 against it, and 2 tie votes, it was accordingly declared adopted.

Dr. JOHNS, of New-Orleans, offered resolutions stating that the Convention recommend, in addition to the usual Quarantine regulations and establishments, the removal of all persons of limited means from reach of infection and the prevention of the ingress of immigrants into ports laboring under pestilential diseases; also, the publication of authorised reports of epidemics, and that Boards of Health and other public bodies be not only obliged to declare the existence, of yellow fever and cholera in their epidemic forms but also to meet special cases which occur in localities under their control. The resolutions were adopted.

A Committee was appointed to prepare the minutes of the body, with such of the communications which had been sent in as they might think proper, for publication. Resolutions of thanks to the officers and to the Business Committee were then adopted, and the body adjourned to meet at the call of the President.

Dr. SNOW, of Providence, offered the following:

Resolved, That we recommend the adoption of a complete, accurate and uniform system of registration of births and deaths in all our cities, as a necessary accompaniment of efficient sanitary measures.

The resolution was adopted.

Dr. COMBIE then announced that the time had arrived at which the body had been invited to visit the Quarantine.

Councilman HASWELL, of New-York, moved that a vote of thanks be tendered to President JEWELL. Agreed to unanimously. Other members moved that similar compliments be tendered to the various public officers and bodies of Philadelphia, for their attentions, and to the Secretaries and Business Committee of the Convention. Agreed to.

The meeting then adjourned, the members preparing themselves for the visit to the Quarantine.

The Delegates to the Convention partook of a handsome entertainment at the Lazaretto this afternoon, Mayor RICE, of Boston, presiding. Alderman FRANKLIN, of New-York; Dr. BARROW, of New-Orleans; Dr. SELDEN, of Norfolk; Alderman WEISMAN and Mayor RICE, of Boston, made speeches in response to toasts.

Protest of the Dutch Catholic Bishops against the Doctrine of the Immaculate Conception.

PASTORAL INSTRUCTIONS OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF UTRECHT AND THE BISHOPS OF HARLEM AND BREDA, ON THE SUBJECT OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION.

When we heard of the great preparations that were being made for deliberating on the point of the conception at Rome, in December, 1854, we found, and with good reason, that these preparations would all be found eventually to have been little more than an outward form; but we nevertheless hoped that the prayers of many good men, so earnestly solicited by the Holy Father, for the light of the Holy Spirit, would be so heard as to succeed in turning the counsels of Ahitophel into foolishness. The unsearchable judgments of Divine Providence have otherwise ordered. PIUS, alas! the weak PIUS, having once thrown himself into the arms of the Jesuits, has now again lent his name and his influence to accomplish a deed deeply grieving all good men, and causing new scandal in the church.

The encyclical letter of the 8th of December, 1854, threatens the wrath of Almighty God, &c., to all who should dare to speak against, or even not to accept, the decision therein announced respecting the conception of the Virgin.

How great soever may be our respect for his Holiness as head of the Church and the centre of Catholic unity, we should dread still more the displeasure of the Almighty if we accepted such decision.

St. Paul did not threaten the people of Berea with the displeasure of Almighty God when they searched the Scriptures to see if the things which were brought before them "were so;" and St. Luke even confers upon them special honor—"These were more noble than those of Thessalonica," because they did research. If this doctrine of the immaculate conception can be so thoroughly proved to be a doctrine of the Catholic Church as in such apostolic letter it is declared to be, there need no fear arise from such search; yes, rather ought an appeal to go forth inviting such a search, that it may be patent to the whole world that we are indebted to the care and zeal of PIUS IX. for this discovery.

Inasmuch as we have no conviction that PIUS has spoken an infallible word when he declared the immaculate conception of the Blessed Virgin to be a revealed truth of the Catholic faith, we feel it to be our duty to examine the grounds upon which such declaration rests.

These grounds are said by him to be five:—

1. Holy Scripture.
2. Sacred tradition.
3. The continuous feeling of the church.
4. The wonderful unanimity of Catholic pastors and of the faithful.
5. The illustrious acts and constitutions of his predecessors in the papal chair.

After combating the above grounds, they say, in reference to the fourth, "Where is this wonderful unanimity to be found? Naturally in the answers given by the bishops to the encyclical letter addressed to them from Gaeta in 1849. The analysis justifies no such unanimity. The whole dogma of the Immaculate Conception being thus entirely new, there need be no wonder that the mode of announcing it was entirely new. Never formerly were such utterances heard from a Pope's lips; formerly it was the congregated fathers who, after previous deliberations, &c., judged and determined. But it was on this occasion no church council, although, for the eye of the world, such a coloring was attempted to be given to it. The bishops were merely mute attestators of what was proposed by Pope PIUS IX., and with too great reason may the words of the prophet be applied to them, 'Blind watchmen! they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs; they cannot bark.'"—Isaiah, lvi., 10.

Oh! how did those teachers in Israel belie their character! and how was their character trampled on by the first in rank amongst them! An open contumely and spot of shame is thus thrown on the Episcopal character and office, those functionaries having nullified their very position and work as judges of the faith.

When the successor of St. Peter gave utterance to the lie that the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception had been revealed by God, was there no Paul to withstand and gainsay him to the face? On the contrary, they winked in the lowest cajolery when one of the French Bishops looked his Holiness in the face and said: "Holy Father, thou hast not only decided the Immaculate Conception; thou hast decided thine own infallibility."

Under the fifth head of the pastoral instruction, reference is made to GREGORY the Great, INNOCENT III., and INNOCENT V., CLEMENT VI., &c., to show that for fourteen centuries a doctrine was held in entire contradiction to that promulgated by PIUS IX., and it is then said:

We leave it to every unprejudiced person to decide whether we have good ground for the strictures we have made, and whether we have proved or not that the apostolic letter issued by PIUS IX., on the 8th of December, 1854, is simply a tissue (amencuse/ed) of untruths, wherein the name of Scripture and sacred traditions are shamefully misapplied to exalt into a matter of faith a mere matter of feeling or subjective impression, not even based on the lowest grade of probability.

In conclusion, we solemnly declare before the whole world that the maxim "Quod semper, quod ubique, quod ab omnibus," reaches not her in teaching nor in acceptance to this dogma of the Immaculate Conception, and we say to all Catholics, "Remove not the ancient landmark which thy fathers have set." (Proverbs xxii. 28.) "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." (Gal. i., 8.) "Remember how thou hast received and heard; and hold fast." (Rev. iii., 3.)

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE NEW POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—No more Policemen were to enroll to-day. The new Police Commissioners held private meeting at the residence of President DRAPER's office, corner of Pine and William streets. At their meeting yesterday they considered further the procurement of a permanent and suitable office, but came to no definite conclusion. They had under consideration, also, a new code of rules and regulations, and some other subjects of local importance, but did not, so far as ascertained, make any additional appointments. Superintendent TALLMADGE did not send any more policemen to Staten Island, nor he will do so, we understand, should circumstances require. It was rumored about the City Hall, yesterday morning, that several of the Police Captains had complied with an order from the New Superintendent to deliver their Stationhouses over to the jurisdiction of the new Commissioners. Up to a late hour yesterday no such order had been issued, and it is understood that not any of the Captains will comply with any such order, but will not so at present until the Police difficulty is legally and finally settled.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE BILL.—The Young Men's Democratic Union Club of this City, had a very interesting meeting last evening, at their Hall in Broome-street. After the transaction of the regular business, Wm. J. R. R., Esq., moved that a Committee be appointed by the Chair to draft resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the Club, in relation to the Act lately passed by our State Legislature, partially designating the Metropolitan Police Bill.

Mr. Rose sustained his motion forcibly and eloquently, and it was unanimously adopted. The President, SIMEON W. COBB, thereupon appointed Messrs. ROSE, GAGE, and HARRISON, a Committee to report at a special meeting of the Club, to be held at the same place on Monday evening next, and the Club, amid much enthusiasm, adjourned to meet again as appointed.

THE NEW QUARANTINE BUILDINGS.—The bids for building the new offices for the use of the quarantine at Seguin's Point were all in on Wednesday, and yesterday they were opened at the office of the Commissioners. There was a large number of proposals, and parties interested in the decision were present in strong force. The contract for building a high board fence around the premises, an area of about six acres, was awarded to JAMES ANDERSON. That for the erection of three wooden hospital buildings, 65 by 75 feet, of one-story, was awarded to Dobson & Lewis. Bids for the work of building a Pier in the form of an L, 150 feet long, with a 15 feet front, will be received up to 12 o'clock Monday. The four buoys, to mark the limits of the quarantine anchorage, have been purchased, and will be placed in position in a few days.

SALE OF THE LATE REV. DR. SCHROEDER'S LIBRARY.—The library of Rev. Dr. SCHROEDER, recently deceased, was sold, on Tuesday, at auction by Messrs. BANGS BROTHERS. The Library being an extensive one, and containing a large number of very choice and learned works, there was a numerous attendance at the sale and bidding spirited. Walton's London Polyglott Bible, with an appendix and lexicon, the last of which is given in nine languages, sold for the largest price, it being sold for $183. One of the same editions was not long since sold at auction in London for $650. The Babylonian Talmud, in 18 volumes folio, printed in Venice in 1520, sold for $8 50 a volume. A manuscript copy of the Koran in the Arabic language was knocked down for $3 25. Buxtorf Thesaurus Rechtsticus, in two volumes, was sold at $7 a volume. Bomberg Rabbinical Bible, an old work, in four volumes, printed in Venice, from the library of of the Earl of OXFORD, brought $3 a volume only. Combined with a lot of Chinese books was one in a language which Professor BUSH, who was present, was unable to indicate. The entire lot sold at 50 cents each. Altogether, the proceeds of the sale came up to expectation. Among the principal bidders were Dr. CONGDEWELL, of the Astor Library, Dr. CHASE, of the Union Theological Library, and the second-hand book-seller at the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets.

A HUMANE HACK-DRIVER FINDS APPRECIATIVE AND REWARD.—JOHN G. STARR, who served as an officer in the Nicaraguan army under Col. LOCKRIDGE, and was wounded in the last attack on Castillo, died from the effects of his wounds on the 27th ult., at Savannah, Ga., his former place of residence. Capt. STARR arrived in New-York on the Tennessee, on her last trip. Like a large number of his former companions in arms in Gen. WALKER's service, who came on with him, he landed in this City without money, without decent clothes, and without relatives or friends upon whom he could call. Added to this, he was suffering much from the wounds he had received. A hack-driver, Mr. J. A. VANDYKE, residing at No. 9 North Moore-street, seeing his destitute and disabled condition, took him to his own house, and after several days secured him a passage in a steamer to Savannah, Ga., where his parents resided. Capt. STARR lived but a few days after his arrival among his friends. Mr. VANDYKE yesterday received from the friends of the deceased a silver pitcher and salver, valued at $150. On the pitcher was the following inscription:

"To J. A. VANDYKE, from the relatives of the late JOHN G. STARR, of Savannah, Ga., an officer of the Nicaraguan army, in grateful memory of his kindness to him on arriving sick and wounded at New-York, April 16, 1857."

In addition to the above, a douceur of $150 in money was sent to Mr. VANDYKE.

THE TROUBLE AT THE BROADWAY ARCADE.—The present proprietors, or present managers, of the Broadway Arcade, are in trouble with each other, out of which grew, not long ago, a charge of assault and battery, and yesterday the matter was further involved by a charge of false pretences preferred against one of the parties. The affair will be investigated before Justice OSBORNE.

DEDICATION OF A NEW BETHEL-SHIP.—The new Bethel ship, John Wesley, moored at the pier between Rector and Albany streets, North River, was dedicated to the divine service at 3 o'clock P. M., on Tuesday. The announcement that Bishop SIMPSON would preach the dedication sermon called together a large audience, which filled the little chapel to overflowing. The text was taken from the 12th chapter of Daniel, 4th verse: "And many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

A collection amounting to $2,700 was taken up.

The enterprise was started twelve years ago, and was the beginning of the mission to Scandinavian seamen in the port of New-York. There are now thirty missionaries preaching in the Scandinavian tongue in this country, who are the fruits of this mission, and five in Europe. The new vessel cost $10,000, and is beautifully fitted up. $4,000 only are required to free the concern from debt, and an earnest appeal is made for present aid. Rev. O. J. _____, on board, and Rev. D. TERRY, No. 199 Mulberry-street, receive subscriptions.

☞ Yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, a belated passenger running after one of the Fulton Ferry-boats just as it was leaving the wharf on the Brooklyn side, miscalculating the distance, jumped into the river, instead of landing on the deck of the boat. A ladder was immediately lowered by the hands on the dock, and the unfortunate individual, after a little floundering about, mounted it and stood on dry land again, a wetter and a wiser man.

☞ ARREST OF A FUGITIVE.—A telegraphic dispatch was received at the Office of the Chief of Police, on Thursday evening, stating that a man named JAMES HEALY, had absconded from Boston, taking with him a considerable amount of jewelry, belonging to the firm of BALL, JONES & STEBBINS, of that city, in whose employ he had served as porter. The dispatch gave a description of the fugitive, and added, that it was believed he had fled to New-York, in order to take passage to California. Officers BOWYER and FARLEY, of the Reserve Corps were detailed to hunt him up, and in less than an hour afterwards they brought him captive to the City Hall, having found him in a lodging-house in Greenwich-street. A very valuable gold watch and some other articles of jewelry, amounting, in value, to several hundred dollars, were found with him. But a little while before he had given the watch to a friend to get it pawned. HEALY was yesterday taken before Justice OSBORNE. He will be sent back to Boston today, in charge of an officer from that city.

STEALING FROM HIS EMPLOYERS.—A young man named HENRY SIMON was examined yesterday, at the Lower Police Court, by Justice CONNOLLY, and committed for trial on a charge of stealing from TIFFANY, YOUNG & CO., Broadway jewelers, a considerable quantity of jewelry. SIMON was in the employ of TIFFANY, YOUNG & CO. about a year, but left a few weeks since because an application from him for increased pay was not complied with. He went to Boston, where he acted in a manner that led to his arrest by Deputy Chief HAIN, of that city. On searching him a considerable amount of jewelry was found in his possession, and in his pocket-book were found a number of the cards of the firm whom employ he had just left. SIMON was detained, and a telegraphic dispatch sent to this City, whereupon Officer BOWYER repaired to SIMON's lodgings in Houston-street, in this City, and he there found a great many small articles of jewelry, some pieces of which had been mutilated and defaced to prevent identity. SIMON does not deny his guilt. His honesty had not been for a moment doubted by his employers.

DIED OF HIS INJURIES.—An inquest was held yesterday, by Coroner GAMBLE, at No. 141 Worth-street, upon the body of RICHARD FITZGERALD, a laboring man, who came to his death from injuries received on Tuesday by falling from one of the upper stories of the building No. 5 Spruce street. Deceased was a native of Ireland and 56 years of age.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BARING BURGLARY.—A German, named George Smith, aged 25 years, was brought before Justice WOOD, at the ESSEX Market Police Court yesterday morning, and committed on a charge of burglary. It appears that about 9 o'clock Thursday evening, Smith went to the jewelry store of Lewis Winterbauer, No. 115 Division-street, and fastening the door on the outside with a rope, so as to delay pursuit by those within, thrust his hand in through the show-window, and grabbed a gold watch and locket, valued at $60, with which he made rapidly away. The job was seen by a young man named Samuel Dee, who gave chase, crying "stop thief," as he ran. Officer Lafayd, of the Tenth Police District, soon joined in the chase, and after a long run, succeeded in overhauling Smith. The watch and locket was afterwards found in an alley-way in Hester-street, where the thief had thrown them in his flight.

ARREST OF A FEMALE ON A CHARGE OF ROBBERY.—Ida Cohen, keeper of a cigar store in the Bowery, was committed to prison yesterday by Justice WOOD, on a charge of robbing John Holt of a gold watch and chain, valued at $100. Holt alleges that Ida enticed him into a room in the rear of her cigar store, and there contrived to steal the property. The accused denies the theft.

THROWING GARBAGE IN THE STREET.—A brisk war is raging against parties guilty of violating the Corporation ordinance relative to throwing garbage, &c., in the streets. Three such were fined yesterday by Justice WOOD. They were arrested by the Ninth Ward Police.

DEAD INFANTS.—A dead infant was found yesterday morning in a cigar box at the foot of Twenty-first-street, East River.

The body of an infant was found Thursday night in a sink at the rear of No. 80 Oliver-street, by some night scavengers.

PARTIAL DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.—Dr. HARVEY, Principal and Proprietor of the Philadelphia Ear Institution, is now in New-York, and generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the Ear, without charge until cured, thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying self-styled aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of still more serious evils, by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskillful hands. Dr. H. may here state that he has no connection whatever with any person advertising to cure deafness. Neither has he given permission for the publication of a certificate, purporting to emanate from him, and cannot, therefore, be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from rashness and desperation. The loss of money may not be material to some persons, but the deprivation of one of the most important of the senses ought to be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude. Deafness, noise in the head, and all disagreeable discharges from the ear speedily and permanently removed without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed where malformation does not exist. Thirteen years' close and almost undivided attention to this branch of special practice has enabled him to reduce his treatment to such a degree of success as to find the most confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed. The destruction by fire of the Institution of which Dr. HARVEY was the head having temporarily released him from his duties in Philadelphia, he will receive calls during each morning at No. 141 Ninth-street, third door east of Broadway.

BROWN'S BRONCHITAL TROCHES.—We have heretofore expressed our opinion of the value of this preparation to those affected with Coughs, Hoarseness, incidental to public speaking, or derangements of the Bronchial Tubes, proceeding from whatever causes. The neat, portable style in which they are put up adds much to their usefulness. They can be had from any druggist.

LONG ISLAND.

THE LOST MR. HENDRICKSON.—Mysterious disappearances have been frequent from the day on which Moses looked out upon the promised land and was seen no more, down to the last remarkable case of Mr. HENRY HENDRICKSON, published in the TIMES of yesterday. Perhaps more frequent within the past few weeks than for a long time before. And yet the interest in this, the last known when we write, is as deep as when the first case of recent date startled the public ear. "She left her home, to return again at dark, and was never seen again," may be read a thousand times, and the same sad thoughts arise after each repetition.

An instinctive horror of such a fate—no friend to know how, when or where we died, and a strong desire to know what is not known—sets us to wondering what the circumstances were. We theorize and speculate, only to theorize and speculate again. Our theories and speculations produce no known facts in the case, and the mystery remains as impenetrable as before. The disappearance of Mr. HENDRICKSON is such a case. He resided in Brooklyn; left his home more than a week ago for Huntington, West Hills, some thirty-five miles distant, on Long Island, where he arrived the same day that he left home; he there received payment of a debt, amounting to about $1,000; while there he purchased five cows and three calves; driving his purchase before him, he commenced his journey home; remained at Jericho all the night of the 8th of May; left Jericho on the following morning with his stock, and passed the toll gate after leaving Jamaica at about 12 o'clock, with a boy who was assisting him to drive his cows and calves; they all proceeded on the Williamsburg road, and since that time neither calves nor cows, boy nor man have been seen or heard from, although his friends and relatives in Brooklyn have been doing their utmost to find traces of him. Such a disappearance is strange, beyond measure. The idea that he could have taken his purchase to some distant place to sell, again, is not entertained by those who are familiar with him. They utterly repudiate the idea that he would have remained, voluntarily, so long from the knowledge of his family, and entertain the impression that he has been murdered, while on that wood-lined road to Williamsburg. The statement of the toll-keeper to the effect that soon after Mr. HENDRICKSON passed his gate, a man followed him, who stopped and inquired whether such a person had traveled that way, strengthens their impression that he has met with violence. If so, where is the boy? Whose boy was he? Has he been murdered too? Had the boy no home, where his absence would create alarm? This very remarkable case has been known generally for several days, and yet we have not heard that any one has met a boy, who could with probability be supposed to have been with Mr. HENDRICKSON when last seen. And yet if the boy were alive, and anything unusual had occurred that he had knowledge of, he would surely have spoken of it to some one. Then the five cows and three calves. Where are they? Even if slaughtered, their spotted skins and absent horns might, ere this, have afforded some clue. Then, again, what did Mr. HENDRICKSON probably intend to do with the cows and calves? Was he likely to have purchased them to take home? His friends should know. Altogether, setting aside the idea that he purchased them to sell again in some distant market, his is the most remarkable of all the mysterious disappearances that have recently been known.

Perhaps the following may aid in solving the mystery:

"One Hundred Dollars Reward offered for the body of HENRY HENDRICKSON, supposed to have been murdered on the Williamsburg Road; when last seen it was East from the first toll-gate from the Jamaica Road, May 8, 1857, about 1 o'clock P. M., driving five cows with three calves. A boy was seen with him; if he will come forward and state all he knows, he will be suitably rewarded.

Also, $50 reward will be paid for the five cows missing at the same time, two without horns with calves, one spotted, the other red; one with horns, white stripe on the back, color brown, with a calf; the other two without calves, one black and the other red, with some white spots.

If these cows have been purchased by any person or persons, if they will give such information that will lead to the identity of the person or persons selling the same, a suitable reward will be paid for the same by the subscribers. A. W. HENDRICKSON,
Corner of Bridge and Plymouth streets.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—May 15.
Before Judge Strong.

SUIT TO RECOVER POSSESSION OF A CHILD.

Dwight H. Olmstead vs. Maria Olmstead and Caroline L. Randall.—Plaintiff in 1856 married respondent, Maria, who is a daughter of the other respondent in this action. About a year after their marriage, and while the parties to this suit were boarding together, the mother and wife abandoned the husband, and took up lodgings elsewhere. The fruit of this marriage was one child, now about 14 months old. The present action is brought by the father to recover possession of the child. From the testimony, it appears that one cause of contention was the fact that the husband's expenses were larger than his salary, and another that the wife being possessed of some property put it in possession of her mother before the marriage ceremony was performed. One witness swore that the mother had told her frequently that she desired a separation and intended to have it and spoke in derogatory terms of the husband; also that he did not respect her, but that another gentleman did—he loved Maria and she intended to have it stated so that they could be married.

Medical testimony was introduced to show that to remove the child from a mother's care at the present time would endanger its life. Dr. Rowland testified that he had been practicing obstetrics for thirty-three years. In all cases he advised children to be nursed past the second Summer; it would be better to nurse them for two years; his own were nursed two and a half years.

The papers in the case were all submitted to the Court. Decision reserved.

FRIDAY, May 15—P. M.

The steamship Asia arrived at this port early this morning, from Liverpool Saturday, May 2. The Money and general market accounts are one week later. The farmer continued to show an active demand at very full rates of interest in London and in the Continental cities. The English Funds are slightly lower, while the French Bourse is reported depressed; the 3 ⅌ cent. Rents 68.70, and Crédit Mobilier shares 1,280 francs. The high price for Money also continues to affect unfavorably the Cotton trade at Liverpool and Manchester, and the raw material is a sixteenth of a penny lower on the finer, and an eighth of a penny on the lower grades, with sales of 45,440 bales, mostly to the trade. On the other hand, the Grain market is rapidly recovering from the late depression, and an advance of 4d. the bushel on Wheat, 1s. the bbl. on Flour, and 1s.@2s. 6d. the quarter on Corn, was established on the previous week's sales at Liverpool; the same feeling obtaining in London. Indian Corn had been done as high as 37s. for White, and 34s. 3d.@35s. for Yellow and mixed parcels. Extra brands of Flour were in request in both markets. In American Stocks, the business was light. Mr. SATTERTHWAITE remarks:

"The market for American Securities in London has been dull and inactive during the past week, and where sales have been effected they have been done at a slight decline. In the present condition of the money market buyers are scarce, and to effect sales a reduction in price has to be submitted to. We note a few purchases of Illinois Shares in small amounts at our former quotations."

The quotations for New-York Central 6s are 80 ex div., 7s 94, shares 82@84; Southern Michigan Sinking Fund, 70@72 ex dividend; Eries of 1883, 83@85; Sinking Fund 84, and Convertibles 75 ⅌ cent.

The following table will show the fluctuations in Consols since the 24th ult.:

	FOR MONEY.			FOR ACCOUNT.
April.	Lowest.	Highest.	Closing.	Lowest.	Highest.	Closing
Sat.	92	92⅞	92⅞	92	92⅛	92
Mon.	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92	92⅞
Tues.	92	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	93	92⅞
Wed.	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞
Thur.	90	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	92⅞	91⅞

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 25th of April gives the following results, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits	£5,311,615	Decrease £460,941
Other deposits	9,450,494	Decrease 1,219,916
Rest	3,963,516	Increase 9,839
Government securities	11,886,196	Unchanged.
Other securities	17,739,004	Decrease 675,357
Notes unemployed	8,519,880	Decrease 129,890

The amount of notes in circulation is £19,788,655, being an increase of £53,910, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £9,555,235, showing a decrease of £50,514, when compared with the preceding return.

The latest report of the Londen Money Market is the following from the Times of Saturday morning, May 2. The day before was a holiday on the Stock Exchange, on account of the shutting of transfers at the Bank of England:

"The demand for money in the discount market and at the Bank continues without the slightest abatement. The requirements to-day are supposed to have been partly in preparation for the heavy liabilities to be met on Monday, the 4th, and partly to pay for a considerable portion of the silver to be taken by the Pera to India and China, which, although below the amounts shipped by the previous mails, will still be about £500,000. Generally, however, the feeling in the city to day seemed rather less unfavorable. The arrival of the Magdalena from Mexico and the West Indies, with £520,000, exercised a satisfactory influence, and the letters from Paris, notwithstanding a further fall on the Bourse, were in a rather more confident tone. From Vienna the accounts describe almost a panic with regard to the shares of new undertakings with which the market has been flooded, but there does not at present seem to be any apprehension of irretrievable mischief in that quarter. During the coming week the movements in the various European money markets will depend in a considerable degree on the reports of the progress of the silk worm in Italy, Spain and France, and also on the question whether the late severe weather has been found to have inflicted damage on the grain or other crops."

The English Board of Trade returns for the month of March, and for the first three months of 1857, show an Export trade as follows, by comparison with the corresponding period of the previous two years:

	For the month.	For three months.
1855	£7,311,905	£18,898,517
1856	9,448,570	25,149,103
1857	10,456,548	28,327,493

Our own Stock and Money markets were very quiet to day. The business done at the Board of Brokers was moderate at both sessions, and prices, with the exception of two or three of the Railroads, much the same as yesterday. On the first call of the list as much as 140 ⅌ cent. was paid for Illinois Central Stock, but after the deliveries of the day were provided for the bids declined to 139@138; the lowest registered sale, 139 Cleveland and Pittsburg shares advanced to 48¼ ⅌ cent. from 44 day before yesterday, and that price bid for 500 shares at the close. Illinois Central Bonds rose to par again. California Sevens to 57 ⅌ cent. Other State Stocks dull. No change in Money rates or the general ease of supply noticed yesterday. The Bremen packet steamer [illegible] sails to-morrow, and the [illegible] day for Havre. We hear of only one small engagement of Bullion for either vessel. The transactions in Exchange are light. The Sub-Treasury received, to-day, $105,226; disbursed $152,788, and held at the close $12,640,264. The Asia brought $214,000 in Spanish coin.

The subscriptions to the guaranteed Stock of the Michigan Southern amounted this afternoon to $8,786,000. The additions to-day were chiefly from the country stockholders, a large number of whom have yet to be heard from. The programme of the new stock assumed that 75,000 shares, (including 5,000 or 6,000 held abroad,) out of the 88,500 of the common stock, would avail of the privilege, which, at 40 ⅌ cent., will give $3,000,000. Should more than 8,500 shares common stock fail to come in, the remainder of the new will be ratably distributed to the stockholders who have subscribed in excess of their 40 ⅌ cent. privilege.

A letter from Prairie du Chien states that the track of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Road, at three different points, has been washed useless by the washing away of the embankments of the bridges. A large quantity of wood has also been carried away, but whether owned by the Road or the Directors, is not stated.—Express.

We are authorized by the office here to say that no bridges have been carried away, and that the line is in complete running order. This information is by telegraph from the Milwaukee office, as late as yesterday.

The Dry Goods Import for the week is $756,103, against $1,278,068 the week ending May 17, last year. The following is the summary:

The Michigan Southern Privilege.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

If I have a contract to receive 100 shares Southern Michigan at about 70 per cent., and do not care to subscribe to 40 shares of the Guaranteed Stock provided I can sell my privilege to do so, at its right value, will you tell me the rule of calculation to determine such value? In other words, what ought I to get for the privilege? INQUIRER.

The rule in the case is a very simple one, assuming the guaranteed Stock to be worth par. It is the difference between the price of the two Stocks to the extent of 20 shares—the other 20 shares being paid for at par in cash, thus—

	Privilege worth.
